Stony Plain Town Council.

Stony Plain Town Council held its regular meeting on Thursday last, Jan. 4, with all the members present.

The first subject up was the new Pound Bylaw, which was given two readings. This will now be sent to the Department for approval, before being finally passed by the Council.

Fire protection was discussed, and the entire Council appointed itself a committee to see an engine up for sale by Edmonton F. D.

Tenders will be called for the poles required in connection with the lighting system for the town—forty 25-footers and two 40 footers, peeled, and 6 inches at top end.

About a dozen accounts were passed and ordered paid if found correct.

The matter of bonding the Secretary Treasurer was passed on.

A letter was read from Supt. Douglas, of the Department of Agriculture, regarding the transfer of some land in the disputed area between the town and the Demonstration Farm.

The Athletic Association will be asked to pay the agreed-on rent for the use of the R-freshment Palace, last Dominion Day.

Bylaw No. 89, re municipal elections, was given three readings, and finally passed. The matter of sending a Royal Princess from Stony Plain to the Winter Carnival in Edmonton, from January 24th to 27th, inclusive, was referred to the Athletic Association.

Direct vs. Indirect Taxation

Quite a rumour is being raised in certain quarters over the imposition of the two-cent stamp tax on receipts given for amounts of ten dollars and over, and recently an attempt was made to stop the Dominion Government from refraining from putting this tax into effect on January 1st as it was authorized to do by Parliament at its last session, this attempt taking the form of an organized deluge of telegrams addressed to the Prime Minister and all to be delivered to him the same day.

Whatever may be said for or against this particular tax, it is neither new in principle nor as a matter of fact, new in this particular form. Stamp taxes on receipts are in vogue in many countries. They are not even new in Canada, because, many years ago before the war laid such a huge burden of debt on the Dominion, this form of taxation was in vogue. When the stamp tax on cheques was inaugurated, there were complaints, and these were renewed when the graduated cheque tax based on the amount for which a cheque was drawn was put into force.

As a matter of fact, whenever any system of direct taxation is adopted there is public complaint, although, when the subject of taxation is discussed in the abstract, nine out of ten people will be found to frankly admit that direct taxes are the fairest and least expensive form of taxation. The trouble is that, in the course of the years, when people are paying taxes, they are always popular with politicians, even though the result is to impose heavier taxation than is necessary, and, worse still, even though other people are enabled to increase their personal profits at the expense of the tax-paying public without the public treasury reaping the benefit.

When a man draws a cheque for fifty dollars or less and places a two-cent stamp on it he knows that the Dominion treasury has benefited to the full extent of the tax thus paid by him. The same thing is true of the receipt tax. No private or third party can get any refund. The taxpayer pays and the Government gets the whole amount he pays. The same holds true of the postage stamps he places on letters or parcels, the stamp tax on matches, and the taxes paid on incomes.

But when a man buys an imported article in a store costing one dollar and upon which a Customs duty is levied he, as a rule, considers he is merely paying the proper selling price of the article. He does not, and in the majority of cases cannot, figure out how much of that dollar represents the actual value of the article in question, and how much has been added on account of the tariff. Least of all does he know how much of the added price because of the tariff goes into the Dominion treasury and how much represents a super-tax imposed on him by the original importer, the wholesaler, jobber and retailer. Yet, if the article in question has passed through several hands before reaching the ultimate purchaser, the chances are that almost as much such purchaser on the score of the tariff is from 50 to 75 per cent. greater than the Government receives, because each middleman has added his percentage of profit, not on the original cost, but on the cost plus the tariff. Thus the indirect tax paid by the consumer increases like the proverbial snowball.

Furthermore, the imposition of an indirect tax through the medium of a Customs tariff makes it possible for the domestic manufacturer and producer of articles of a class similar to the imported article to enhance the selling price of his untaxed goods to a figure approximating to the price of the imported article. In all such cases the Government gets nothing at all in the way of revenue, but the public are paying handsomely just the same.

These things are not possible in the case of direct taxes, and it is passing strange, therefore, that so many people criticize and grumble over the payment of a direct tax—whichever, after all, comes back to them in public service of one kind or another while at the same time viewing with a large degree of complacency the more and heavier, indirect taxes of which the Government receives but a part of the total.

Direct taxes are infinitely preferable to indirect taxes, provided they are made as simple as possible, and the method of their collection comparatively inexpensive. And what can be simpler than the affixing of a stamp to a cheque or receipt, and what could be cheaper than the Government being nil beyond the actual engraving and sale of the stamp itself.

Undoubtedly it is a matter of education. Before the war Canada had no direct taxes, except such as were levied on tobacco, etc. The Dominion's revenue was chiefly derived through Customs duties, and the Canadian got the idea they were the great untaxed nation of the world. Great Britain, on the other hand, has always levied a heavy income tax, and it is admitted the world over that the British system is sound and productive of great revenues to the State. It is well that Canada should, more and more, follow Britain's example. At all events, the heavy war debt makes it imperative that we do so for some considerable time at least.

Copper Horseshoes

New Used As a Means of Preventing Forest Fires

Copper horseshoes as a means of preventing forest fires have recently made their appearance in the forests of the west, and, if the plan of certain forestry officials are carried into effect, this metal will supplant steel upon the hoofs of all horses to be used on public domains where there is any measure of fire hazard. According to some of the superintendents, steel horseshoes used in flinty mountainous regions may have been the cause or some of the mysterious fires that have started in forest reserves. Heavy steel horseshoes striking against flint or hard granite may readily be the source of sparks, which, falling into dry grass or other inflammable material, would quickly cause it to burst into flames if fanned by a breeze.

WHY RHEUMATISM OFTEN COMES BACK

The Usual Treatment Does Not Reach the Root of the Trouble. Most treatments for rheumatism do no more than aim to keep down the poison in the blood and enable nature to overcome the particular attack. Then when the system becomes run-down from any cause the disease again gets the upper hand and it all has to be done over.

Sufferers from rheumatism who have found their kidneys unrelieved or actually growing worse while using other remedies, would do well to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The only treatment with this medicine has proved in thousands of cases that it builds up the blood to a point which enables it to cast out the rheumatic poisons through the regular channels of excretion, the bowels, kidneys and the skin.

When this is done rheumatism is banished, and as long as the blood is kept pure and rich the patient will be immune from attack. This is proved by the case of Mrs. J. Hewitt, Beach P.O., Hamilton, Ont., who says: "For a number of years I was troubled with muscular rheumatism, which caused me a great deal of suffering. I tried all the pills for rheumatism, but they did not get rid of the trouble for a time, but it always came back. A friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have not had an attack of rheumatism since I took them, and that is five years ago. I now use the pills for anaemia and found them equally good, and I now recommend them to any friends who may be ailing."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Business Interests Speculating On The General Outlook For Trade For The New Year

Much eagerness is manifested by business interests in getting a line, if possible, on the business outlook for 1923. Business men generally are inclined to think that things will be better than they were last year, but at the same time they are not quite sure.

So far as the country as a whole is concerned, since agriculture is the greatest industry, conditions will depend on the farmers, and, as is well known, his purchasing power has been cut away down. In the east the complaint is that while the eastern farmers are solvent they have no surplus money to spend.

In high business circles much caution is being manifested. Owing to the circumstances that it has had an enormous amount of grain to move, the Canadian Pacific's earnings were higher than last season. The Grand Trunk is helping out the Government system because its earnings show an increase through its handling of so much American traffic.

It is probable the railways realize that they must economize, because they know that the western farmer, owing to the low margin of profit on which he now works, cannot afford to buy in his old-time way and that consequently the moving of freight westward will not be normal for a while. It is the west that keeps a large portion of the east busy and conditions down there will not get back to normal until the west buys heavily again. Big business men also know that the old-time immigration is not going into the western provinces. The United States Government has been getting anxious over the possible effect of the Fordney tariff on its export trade, but Secretary of Commerce Hoover seems to have given the assurance that the issue is really coming back and that American export trade will improve.

If Hoover's opinion is correct, business in Canada will improve also, for in business matters this country closely follows the States. In brief, more confidence, quietness as much as gain, seems to be the correct attitude. The last thing to expect is a big expenditure of Government money.

Technical Training Schools

Should Be a Recognized Course of Tuition Throughout Canada.

An ever-increasing demand for technical schools in Canada is being evinced, and the movement should be encouraged both by provincial and municipal authorities. The youth with high technical training has splendid possibilities of success. He starts out with an enviable equipment—especially in Canada—where opportunities of development are to be found on every hand. Schools giving technical instruction are to be found all over the British Isles. The United States also fosters such training with remarkable solicitude. Undoubtedly more technical schools are needed in Canada, and it is most important that they should be provided. Complete and satisfactory progress will not be secured, however, until it is a recognized course of tuition in the daily schools. This, it is true, may involve cost, but it will be a very small part of the ultimate reward.—Montreal Family Herald.

Where the Disgrace Is

A Philadelphia employer attending the building congress in Boston recently was quoted as saying: "It is no disgrace to be a bricklayer. They get $11 a day in our city." It never has been a disgrace to be a good bricklayer or a good workman at any trade, whether the pay be $11 a day or more or less. All work is honorable, the work of the hands no less than the work of the brain. The only disgrace is when any worker refuses to do a fair day's work for a fair day's pay.—Springfield Union.

Progress of Indian Education

Forces of Church and State Combine to Elevate the Red Man

The familiar "Red Man" of history and romance is fast becoming a figure of the past. In his stead, we find the Indian of today, once again a virile, strong type that is being assimilated rapidly into the composite Canadian race. Association with the white man has won a partial immunity from the diseases that played such havoc with the health of the Indian at the time of his initial contact. The Indian population has been slightly increasing for some time; and in many parts of Canada we have flourishing groups of natives, fast adopting our methods of earning a livelihood and clamoring for an education.

The Dominion Government realizes the importance of providing proper educational facilities for its wards, and large appropriations for Indian education are being made from year to year. The Department of Indian Affairs, of which Honorable Charles Stewart is Superintendent General, is responsible for, or is associated in the maintenance of, about 780 teachers of Indian youth. Most of the workers are missionary teachers; the Churches and the State are working side by side in the effort to prepare future Indian men and women for broader citizenship.

Some 12,600 Indian children are enrolled today in the 320 day and residential schools. These schools are not under the control of the departments of education in the different provinces, but are financed and managed jointly by the Department of Indian Affairs and the various Churches engaged in the work. In each province the Indian schools are inspected regularly by qualified school inspectors and the work done by Indian pupils closely compared, invariably with that of white schools in the same localities.

In the day schools, in addition to the regular curriculum, emphasis is placed on hand work, gardening, hygiene, and group games. The residential schools give still further training in the manual arts that will assist the pupil in later life. The boys are trained in farming, gardening, and the care of stock; the girls are systematically taught all household duties. Parliament annually provides appropriations—amounting last year to $1,262,120.45—from which the expenditures for the maintenance of the various institutions are made. The Churches which are co-operating provide further funds to finance them. These grants are supplemented from Indian Trust Funds when they are available.

Special training or assistance is offered to the promising graduates of the day and residential schools. About 90 young Indian men and women are attending high schools and colleges in Canada. Financial assistance and careful supervision for these special pupils are arranged for by the Department of Indian Affairs. Other energetic graduates are given grants for stock, implements, household equipment, or building material. This programme has been a great stimulant to progress and has resulted in early independence.

An important factor in the general scheme is field work. In addition to nearly 40 field matrons and graduate nurses who are working on the reserves, day school teachers, Indian agents, missionaries, and farm instructors take an active interest in the affairs of the Indian in his own habitat. Housewives and mothers are being trained and clean living is promoted. Although the work is slow, the forces of Church and State combine to create steady progress.

A Bad Moral Effect

"The morals of baseball seem rather dubious to me."

"What do you mean?"

"They seem to think just as much of the man who steals a base as they do of the man who earns one."—New Haven Register.

Up to a quarter of a century ago it was customary for the banks in England to fix $500 as the minimum amount for opening an account. Some of the big institutions in London insisted on $5,000.

Tampering With Nature

May Be Possible In Future To Change Climate

If the ancient world could make a desert bloom like the rose, it is hardly too fantastic to imagine a future which could defeat the rigors of an age of ice. The projects which we discuss as hardly serious may be practicable in centuries to come. Not long ago it was suggested that the climate of the Maritime Provinces of Canada might be made far more genial if the chill Labrador current from the Arctic which sweeps down the coast were diverted by a dam built across the Strait of Belle Isle, between Newfoundland and the mainland. The chief argument against the scheme was, we believe, that if the Labrador current were diverted no man could tell what it might hit. It might sweep into the Gulf Stream and disturb all the conditions of Western Europe; it might upset the economy of the world. To tamper with primitive forces is obviously dangerous, but we need not say that in the future man may not have won that knowledge which will give him power over conditions that seem to us to be among the laws of Nature.—From the London Daily Telegraph.

The Canadian Crop

Increased Production of Prairie Provinces Responsible for Big Total

Statistics of this year's field crop throughout Canada state that the total value of production is slightly larger than last year. The whole gain goes to the three prairie provinces. There is a decrease in all the others. "In round figures British Columbia is behind two millions, Ontario six millions, Quebec fifty-two millions, the Maritime Provinces sixteen millions. This is more than offset by the gain of one hundred and thirty millions in the prairie provinces. It should be remembered that this return does not include dairy products or other yield from livestock, nor does it seem to include fruit.

If the farmer had his period of prosperity during the war he has hardly obtained his share of the annual income since the peace. His products, which represent his wages, have come down in price faster than the wages in any other vocation and faster than other commodities. Whether on the whole he has come out better than last year is not yet clear. But the crop of this year measured by quantity has been up to the average the country over.—The Vancouver Province.

American Journal Commends Manner In Which Canada Is Handling Immigration Problem

A Great Merchant Prince

Success Came to John Wanamaker Through Hard Work

In a letter to the New York Times Mr. Joseph Herbert Appell, who has held an important executive position in the Wanamaker stores in Philadelphia and New York for the past twenty-three years, throws interesting sidelights on the career of the late John Wanamaker. Almost everyone knows that this remarkable merchant prince sprang from the usual humble origin, his father and grandfather having been brickmasons. He was the oldest of seven children, and early in his boyhood had to leave school and earn his own living. His start came as errand boy in a Philadelphia book store at $1.25 a week—later as a young man he developed his natural business ability in Tower Hall, where a famous old Philadelphia clothing house. When twenty-four years of age he entered on his independent career in partnership with his brother-in-law on a joint capital of $2,500, in the clothing trade. Success came from the first because he had vision, foresight, industry and integrity. Thus he became a pioneer of modern business, established fixed selling prices and built up the colossal stores that have made his name a household word throughout the continent.

A Bold Pirate Girl

Sailed Under the "Jolly Roger" in the Old Buccaneering Days

There was once a woman pirate who sailed under the "Jolly Roger" in the old-buccaneering days. It was in 1719 that Mary Read was in the full tide of her exploits. She took toll of numerous ships. When her crew argued with her she pistolled them with her own hand. Another woman pirate was Belle Hammond. During the early part of the last century, when French and British privateers were continually offering battle, she had little patriotic motive to inspire her ventures, for she attacked both French and British vessels without distinction, sailing under both flags as occasion required. She met her death in the midst of battle.

Starts Flying At 100

Made 13 Flights Before She Dies in Bed, Aged 103

Mrs. Ann Sissons, of Mansfield, Eng., who developed a mania for flying after she turned 100, died at the age of 103 and was buried with great honors recently. It was on the day following her centenary that she told friends that she had lived beyond her span and that there was only one thing she wanted to do in the world and that was to fly in an airplane. A kindly pilot gave her a flight, which she enjoyed so much that she went again and again until she had had thirteen flights with almost as many hours in the air.

She always said when she started out on a flight that she would crash with the greatest happiness and would never regret having gained this final thrill out of life. She had become known as the flying centenarian. She voted in the recent election.

A Clergyman's Reproof

A clergyman discovered a trouser button in the collection plate one Sunday morning.

In the evening, when he ascended the pulpit, he announced: "I wish to remind you that there will be a collection at the close of the service. The text I have chosen for this evening's sermon is, 'Render your hearts and not your garments.'"

To Rear Foxes In Scotland

Canadian silver fox farming is to have Scottish competition. Reports to the Department of Trade and Commerce from Glasgow indicate that a 40-acre ranch has been established in the north of Scotland for rearing silver black foxes, mink, raccoons, martens, and other fur-bearing animals. It is expected that some breeding animals will be secured in Canada.

It's a wise word that stays under cover. Ned deprives the early bird of his breakfast.

"Where is this gold?" asked the Senator incredulously.

"That's the funny part of it," says Moran; "it is in Wyoming, and as near as I can make out, it must be close to where that young fellow of mine, Helen thinks she's stuck on. I'm not sure but what it's on his place, but even if it is, there is no reason why he should have any of it. The expense will be pretty heavy to do the thing up right, but if you're game, I reckon we can hog the whole business. We can stall this scientific nut off with promises, and probably buy the place for the price of pasture land, and then file claim on the whole doggone tract."

This vision of enormous wealth captivated the Senator, who had made his first start in mining and knew something of its possibilities. Bold as he was, however, he was also cautious, but after several conferences with Moran, he fell in with the scheme, first securing the services of a skilled metallurgist and an equally capable engineer, who were liberally paid and solemnly sworn to secrecy. He sent them out to verify the discovery, and sent Moran to Crawling Water, to establish himself, and to do such preparatory work as should be necessary. In due time, Moran reported by letter that the gold was located, and was beyond question, abundant. He was having trouble, however, in getting the property, as Wade refused to sell.

"Of course," he wrote, "we can file mining claims on the ground we know of, and get possession that way, but I want to make more surveys before doing that, so as to be sure of getting all there is, and we can't do that without giving the whole snafu away, and filling the mountains full of prospectors. If that damn Wade won't sell, I'll find some means to drive him away."

It was just after the receipt of this letter, which filled the Senator with hope on the one hand, and anxiety on the other that he came on Helen one evening, as she was entering her own sitting room, and followed her in for a chat.

"What are you thinking of?" he asked, presently, when she failed to notice some trivial question he had asked, and seemed to be in a reverie. She looked at him with laughing eyes.

"Crawling Water?"

"Gordon Wade, eh? Well, I wouldn't think of him too much. Better let that pass. You've outgrown it."

"Oh, no, I haven't."

The Senator sighed.

"Mother said to me a little while ago, that he was probably going with other girls and forgetting me, and it made me angry."

"Well, reckon your mother is about right. Gordon is a likely looking chap, you know. I've got nothing against you except that he's not good enough for you; no man is. You don't really care so much for him, do you?"

"Oh, don't!" She yiewed her father through half closed lids, in a quizzical way. "I care so very much for him that if I really thought there was another girl, I would go to Crawling Water to-morrow. You'd have to drop everything and take me."

Her father gently pinched her cheek.

"I would, eh? Well, maybe I'll have to go out there anyway. But do you realize what Crawling Water is like—a rough, frontier town?"

"I wouldn't mind that for a while."

"No, I suppose not. You've got too much of your old dad in you to balk at a few difficulties. There's somebody else out there who'd be mighty glad to see your pretty face. Haze Moran."

"Mr. Moran?"

The sudden change in the girl's tone from tenderness to scorn caused the Senator a twinge of uneasiness. His plans were so closely linked with Moran's for the present, that the man might prove dangerous if his love for Helen were too openly scorned. That she could scarcely tolerate him, despite his ability and force of character, her father knew from the past; but even in the moment of his need he did not seek to influence her in Moran's plans, were so closely linked with his own.

"He's been out there for some time, as my agent."

"Yes, I know that. He—he has written to me, although I've never answered his letters. I've been curious to hear from him again, because he promised to send me some kodaks of Crawling Water."

"Maybe he hasn't done so because you've ignored his letters."

Helen's lip curled in disdain.

"I'd never let a little thing like that stop him. But perhaps I will answer the next one, if only to find out what is going on out there. It's all so very mysterious. Do you know, father?" She playfully shook her finger at him.

"This is the first time in a long while that you haven't taken me into your confidence, and I'm sure you'll be punished for it."

The Senator winced at the word punishment, and Helen laughed at what she thought was the effect of her rail lery.

"Why don't you tell me? You see, I'm so worried about Gordon. Honestly, father, I'm serious about that."

"I've him, and I don't want him hurt."

"Hurt? Why, who is thinking of hurting him?"

"Oh, I don't know. Moran hates him, and has referred to him once or twice in his letters that I do not understand. He told me all about it."

"Oh, well, my dear, there's really nothing to tell. It's all concerned with some homestead lands out there

COULD SCARCELY OPEN THROTTLE

"Then I Took Tanlac," Says Engineer, "And It Made Me Strong As A Horse"

"I have a world of confidence in Tanlac for I have taken it and know what it will do," declares John Monan, well-known stationary engineer residing at 2035 Oster St., Regina, Sask.

"For several months I was in a terribly run-down condition generally. I lost weight until I was just a shadow of my former self and got so weak and tired out it was all I could do to keep working. My appetite was about gone, and even when I did manage to eat it never seemed to agree with me or do me any good. I couldn't sleep, got up mornings dead on my feet, and the least little exertion wore me down completely."

"I don't know I could have stayed on the job much longer if it hadn't been for Tanlac. I took several bottles and it not only ended all my troubles but built me up ten pounds. Just say for me that I think Tanlac is the finest medicine in the world."

Tanlac is for sale by all good drug-gists.

Over 35-million bottles sold.

"I don't want to get hold of for an investment. Wade will not be hurt, but that is, we must be if he beats me out. If I win, he'll lose."

"He will?"

"We both can't win, of course. It's to be a fight, yes—an amicable business struggle, I hope. There's no reason for it to be otherwise."

The Senator appeared strangely nervous, despite his effort at self-control. He made as a man who was not sure of his own strength.

Helen thought this over for a moment.

"Perhaps I'd better go out there with you, after all," she remarked, half in jest.

"Then the Senator thought that over for a moment and left the room."

Next day Helen received a package by mail which proved to contain a dozen clear photographs of Crawling Water and its neighborhood.

"First of all, as I thought Moran thought it most important, was a snapshot of himself, which had been taken on a camera on the back of the print, by an obliging cowboy. The girl's face was a study in amused scorn, as she looked at the photograph, for which Moran had posed with a clear in his mouth, his hands in his pockets."

"Then there were a number of views of the town itself, of its main street, its hotel, its dance-hall, and of 'some of the boys' in various poses of photographic self-consciousness. There were also pictures of the marvellously beautiful countryside, but as she neared the end of them, Helen was disappointed to find none of Wade. Of course, he wouldn't send me one of 'em," she said petulantly to herself, and she was rapidly running through the remaining prints only to pause suddenly at the very last, while a rosy tide flooded her face and neck.

The little photograph showed a tall, handsome, vigorous looking man, in the garb of a cattlemen, half turned in his saddle, with one hand resting on his pony's flank. The man was Wade. With his other hand, he was pointing ahead, apparently for the benefit of a girl—a very good looking girl whose fine head was thrown back, as the wind blew her hair into pretty disorder.

Helen reexhild had not hitherto experienced real jealousy, but this little photograph excited it. In the highly artistic light of Crawling Water at noon the camera had done its work well, and the figures of the two stood out from the distant background with stereoscopic clearness. Wade was smiling at the girl, who seemed to be laughing back at him, although her face in the picture was partially turned away, so that Helen got only an impression of charm. But the impression was enough to rouse her jealousy.

On the back of the print, Moran had written:

"A surprise picture of Gordon Wade and our new fellow-sportswoman, Miss Dorothy Purcell, whose beauty and general attractiveness have made her the idol of Crawling Water."

Kindness Counts Most

Gilbon, one of the greatest historians who ever lived, gives the highest praise to what he sets forth as "the mind to conceive, the understanding to direct, the hands to execute. Good as far as it goes, but it does not go all the way. As Arnold Bennett, brilliant British novelist, says in one of his books, the one thing that we can never forgive a man is his failure to have 'kindness of heart. With the mind and the understanding and the hand, there must be the spiritual impulse to do good—Grove Patterson, in Toledo Blade."

Household Hints

Valuable Recipes For The Busy Housewife

Drop Nut Cookies
1½ cups brown sugar, 2 eggs, 23 cups butter, 1 cup water, ¼ teaspoon soda, 1 cup nut meats, 2½ cups flour.

1 cup chopped seeded Sun-Maid raisins.

Cream butter and sugar. Add one-half cup flour. Add eggs well beaten. Add water. Add flour, soda and salt stirred together and before stirring add raisins and nuts. Mix well, being sure that no flour is sticking to the raisins and drop from a spoon onto the well greased and floured bottom of a dripping pan. Bake 12 or 15 minutes in a moderate oven. Butter-lard may be used in place of all butter.

French Toast Made With Raisin Bread
2 eggs, ½ cup milk, ¼ teaspoon salt, 6 large slices stale raisin bread.

Beat eggs lightly. Add salt and milk. Dip bread in mixture until covered on both sides. Fry in a little hot melted fat in frying pan or on a hot greased griddle. Serve plain or with syrup.

CORNS

Doesn't hurt a bit! Instantly a "Freezone" on an aching corn, stop it before it gets right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

A Conundrum
Did the Automobile Create Wealth or Wealt the Automobile?

It is now estimated that our neighbors to the south are spending seven thousand, seven hundred and eighty-three millions of dollars a year on motoring—automobiles, gasoline, repairs and license fees. Twenty-five years ago, the automobile did not exist. Also, twenty-five years ago, 7,833 million dollars was a sum so enormous that even our energetic American friends would never have thought of spending it for anything. Did the automobile create this vast sum, or did the vast sum create the automobile?—Border Cities Star.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It is the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulence, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. Alec Jinks on the Farmers' Government.

Winmin aint got no reapolitical sense! Their mind-is so cluttered up with petty details — they aint got no breadth of vision.

Take my wife for example
— I was tryin' to explain what was wrong with the Farmers' Government; but what with the cookin' and the washin' and the kids, I don't believe she took in half I said.

"What is wrong with the Farmers' Government," I says
"is they aint got the right men in it. There's farmers and farmers. Some farmers don't think about nothin' but their own farms, an' they aint interested in nothin' outside.
So long as they can find someone to buy their grain an' hogs, they aint worryin' who controls the markets. What we've got to do is to take broad views. Vision; that's what we need—Vision!"

"Yes," says my wife, "only I wisht you wouldnt stand in front of the window—you shut out all the light."

I moves aside, disregardin' this interruption, which plainly showed she wasnt interested.

"Nowsome farmers is lazy,"
I continues, "but most of 'em works too hard. Leisure—that's what they need."

"Leisure — what's that?"
asked the wife.

"How ignorant you are," I says. Leisure is time off; time for recreation; time for self improvement. Most farmers works too hard. Their minds is too much occupied with fightin' nature."

"I notice you aint a fightin' nature particular hard this mornin'," remarks the wife sarcastic like.

"Look at the thermometer!" says I. "Thirty below!
Besides the kids has fed all the stock and milked. It is a good opportunity to take some time off to improve our minds."

"It's all very well for you,"
says the wife, "but my work aint never done. You aint got no cookin' and washin'. You can improve your mind as much as you like, only dont bother me."

I didnt like the way she said it; seemed to imply there was considerable room for improvement. I was about to suggest that I should improve her mind while she did the cookin', but she had an idea
first, and says:

"Oh, them kids! Why dont you try to improve their minds and keep them out of my way for a bit. There is hardly room to turn around when they're all home from school and all in the house too."

"I was talkin' poiticks," I says, tryin' hard to be patient with her. "It aint my business to teach kids; that is what we pays school taxes for, aint it? Yes, we pay!

Wireless Concerts From Eiffel Tower

When concerts of the usual kind are going on actively in the great halls of Paris, wireless concerts are also greatly to the fore, public and private, worked from the Eiffel Tower. This tall iron tower, a post of observation, and in war time a point of danger signals, is now the source of the strains of harmony—of rich music—sent forth to distant corners of the city lying below its soaring pinnacles. Wireless concerts are a feature of Paris life of today.

To Eliminate Mixing of Grain

Question Will Be a Live One in the Next Session of the Federal House

Saskatoon district farmers will welcome any movement aiming toward elimination of grain mixing, and are ready to lend their united strength in any fight to this end, according to the consensus of opinion gathered from growers in that territory. These opinions follow repeated reports that the question will be a live one in the next session of the Federal House. They believe the only way to dispose of the wheat crop in fairness to the producer is for each car of grain to be sold on sample basis before it goes into any terminal elevator.

Lack Knowledge Of Canada

Hon. Geo. Graham Finds Americans Know Little About Dominion

That even leading persons in the United States possess little or no knowledge of Canada, and that this state of affairs does not make for mutual understanding, was the contention of Hon. George F. Graham, Minister of Defence, speaking to the Rotary Club at Brockville.

Of 15 delegates to a political convention whom Mr. Graham said he had met on a train in New York State recently, and interrogated, only one could name a Canadian public man, and he mentioned "Mr. Laurier," who had been "Governor-General of Canada."

Back to First Principles
Finding paper marks no good to him, the editor of a weekly paper in a Bavarian town has announced to the public that he prefers to take his subscriptions in kind. For a three month subscription he is ready to receive six pounds of flour, a pound of butter or two dozen fresh eggs.

Many mothers have reason to bless Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, because it has relieved the little ones of suffering and made them healthy.

Thoughtful Dog
A large dog attended a motion picture theat at Ann Arbor the other night, and lay on the floor watching the show quietly and intelligently, not once reading a caption aloud.—Detroit News.

Won Championship For Oats
J. W. Biglands, of Lacombe district, won the oats championship at the International Livestock Show at Chicago in competition with exhibitors from all parts of the U.S., Canada and Mexico. The winning of this much coveted award is another example of the superiority of Canadian grown oats over that grown in other countries, and this award is considered by all growers emblematic of the world's championship.

Is Your Family United at Mealtime?

YOU say "No" to the children when tea or coffee is being passed; but while explaining that little folks should not risk health, do you drink tea or coffee yourself?

Your health is valuable, too—and their need for a hot drink with breakfast may be as great as yours.

Gone to the Coast.

That popular young sportsman, Mr Joseph D Miller, left last week for an extended trip around the Coast cities, including Victoria, Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, &c., &c. His first stop is at Hutton, B.C., where he has a number of good friends, who will no doubt give an old comrade a hearty welcome. His next stop will be at Vancouver, and thence on to Portland, where he will make a short stay with relatives. Rumor has it that Joe is after the managership of one of the teams in the big hockey league; but this cannot be confirmed at present. While visiting the big Coast cities, Joseph will make a study of world conditions; and on his return will discuss with the best of us the cause of the present unrest among the natives, the prevailing unprecedented depression in trade, and the remedy which should be applied to end these, and bring good times and contentment to all. Good-by, Joe!

Wrongful Disposal.

Neils Jensen, farmer near Milk River, was fined $50 and costs recently before a magistrate at Milk River for wrongfully disposing of seed grain supplied to him under the Seed Grain Relief arrangements.

Mr. Finmore acted as secretary and a number of resolutions to be sent to the Provincial convention in Calgary next week, were up for discussion and were acted on, some being laid over for further consideration and others being adopted.

After a Fire Engine.

On Monday Stony Plain Town Council accepted the invitation of Fire Chief Davis to inspect Red Nancy, the second-hand fire engine the Edmonton Fire Department has for sale. The Chief and the fire laddies went to a lot of trouble to give the demonstration; and the general consensus of opinion was that Red Nancy is some shorter—when she gets again.
